HONGKONG, JUNE 22ND, 1892.

A pamphlet on the Huanan anti-treasury literature has reached us. It is printed at the Mercury Office, and is entitled "The Huanan Tract of China, which produced the Anti-Christian and Anti-Foreign Riot of 1891, Analyzed by a Shocked Friend." We thought the "Complete Picture Gallery," published some time ago at Hankow, had reproduced pretty well all of this literature, and very shockingly the collection therewith. But the "Shocked Friend" has some legalizations to the shape of ballads inciting the people to exterminate the Christians, and on one tract there is a rough illustration of a sword on which are characters, which he translates to read—"A new sword for the massacre of Protestants and Communists." That the Huanan might make no mistake and mislead some who were not Christians, the writer says the following provision was made—"A tract in verse, written in large characters, detailing the chief crimes of the Christians and their punishment, is to be posted up outside such door. The Elders are solemnly charged to teach the young how to sing these lines [a ballad written for the purpose] so that they may escape 'the sword of the destroyer.' It would serve no good end to reproduce any of the foul accusations and slanders made on the missionaries and their converts at this stage; they are now sufficiently known both here and we, hope, in Europe. But the great fact that a great and vile conspiracy was hatched in the province of Huanan last year to bring about a general assassination of the missionaries, failing success in driving them out by burning and destroying their dwellings, remains, and this injury has not yet been averted for

Moreover the authors of this literature have escaped without punishment, even the decree ordering the degradation of Chou Han being a very unsatisfactory document, exonerating him of the actual authorship although placing him under surveillance, and depriving him of his rank.

Had the Peiping Government been in earnest wishing to inflict just punishment they would have banished him without ceremony.

The last of the 1st Shropshire Light Infantry will play the following programme at the Officer Mess, Murray Barracks, to-night commencing at 8 p.m.—

THE NEW ORIENTAL BANK.

The following circular letter was sent out to creditors of the New Oriental Bank Corporation

At the entrance of the Peiping (Pekin) Gorge, so named by the local people from a precipice called in the Gazetteer the Kitang Hui—the "forsome pool" gorge—10 miles below Kusshan, the road rounds the corner at a point where a stone would drop perpendicularly 100 feet into the river below, and a startlingly wild and romantic view meets the eye. The river winds its way through a series of vertical limestone cliffs which render it impossible for man without the help of a fair wind—for which, however, they have galdon more than a day or two to wait. The road being within a few miles (10) of its starting point—Kusshan—is the best built portion of the route, though eight feet had been added to the width originally—actually a pent up fair hole. It goes up and down by long flights of steps in a most extraordinary way; at one point rising 500 feet or more above the river. On the morning we started to traverse it, we descended our boat which was sailing on a fair wind to a point on the side of the White Emperor's Gorge just beyond the upper end of the valley, and started early on our seven miles' walk. At last, as the sun began to get especially hot and we were longing to be back in our boat for breakfast, we were gladdened by the sight of the "Gidai," crowning a hill in front of us which we had only separated by a steep slope of rocks. The hill rises from the base of the first stairs of the new road. On reaching the bottom, what was our surprise and disgust to find ourselves landed on the high muddy bank of a wide rapidly flowing stream of the Great River which could neither be forded nor swum over; it had cut itself a deep channel through perpendicular banks impossible to climb.
